

The Kitesurfing Equipment that you should bring to your Advanced Kitesurfing Course

We at Kitekahunas want you to benefit as much as possible from your advanced kitesurfing course and to learn as much as possible here! A key prerequisite for this is the right equipment for the wind conditions in Cape Town. The kitesurfing spots around Cape Town are famous for their usually solid and dense wind - this is why so many kitesurfers come here during our season (October till April each year). We fly rather smaller kites. Please bring for your course:

Your body weight	Light Wind Kite	Standard Kite	Strong Wind Kite
80-90 kg	11-13 m	8-9 m	6-7 m
70-80 kg	10-12 m	7-8 m	5-7 m
60-70 kg	9-11 m	6-7 m	5-6 m
50-60 kg	8-10 m	5-7 m	4,5-6 m

We have recently gone through a major effort to survey and test the market for kites, to find out, which are the best kites to purchase. For this we have interviewed many experienced kitesurfers, what they would buy today and for what reasons. Their primary reasons where: Product quality and durability, access to spare parts throughout the world when they travel, and flying characteristics (performance, de-power, re-launch, safety). The kite that won the survey by far, - and what we recommend and can sell to our customers - is the Slingshot RPM. No surprise, it is also the most sold kite throughout the world lately. With its huge de-power you can fly the RPM as a beginner and with its great performance also as a professional in freestyle and for wave riding. Even the world-champion Yuri Zoon flies the RPM! The kite has an enormous wind range, so that you may even get away with only 2 kites, instead of 3 kites.

For your wetsuit, you will require a full wetsuit, at least 4/3 mm neoprene or 5/3 mm. Possibly you want neoprene underwear to keep you warm. No shoes or gloves or the like are required.

If you don't have this equipment, you can order it through us and purchase it on your arrival in South Africa (please do a reservation beforehand to avoid disappointment). Prices are much cheaper here! And on top, we have further discounts for our customers!

Enjoy your stay with us and your advanced kitesurfing course!
